

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method and apparatus are provided for accessing a dynamic memory device. The method comprises receiving a command from a controller to access a memory, receiving, from the controller, at least one of burst length information and latency information in association with the command to access the memory; and providing data to or from the memory in response to the command based on at least one of the burst length information and the latency information.

5